Q3 2026 Evaluate Asset Class Outlook

Lower interest rates and high stock prices weigh on expectations across the board.

Stock fundamentals diverged less than stock prices so there is some relative variation in outlook.

Being at the back of the pack in recent performance has left US stocks looking a bit cheaper than they did. Emerging market stocks didn't do much better but their fundamentals couldn't keep up and their prospects have slipped relative to other markets. The outlook for European stocks look to have got a bit ahead of themselves and their outlook fell more than the US. The same goes for the UK but to a smaller extent.

Lower interest rates mean lower returns for Gilts.

Corporate bonds remain expensive relative to government bonds and provide nothing to compensate for lower interest rates in general.

Steeper yield curves in most overseas markets provide a boost for overseas bonds.

Falling interest rates are a positive for the property market and the outlook benefits from th...
